NEW YORK—With the help of numerous famous names and faces from Hollywood, Broadway, music and literature, MJHS Foundation hosted its first annual “Reaching for the Stars” benefit on Thursday, May 12, 2011. Nearly 200 people from across the country helped kick-off the “Sixteen Lights” campaign to build New York’s most innovative hospice residences. The event also honored the memory of Howard “Kvetch” Shapiro.

Over the next five years, “Reaching for the Stars” receptions will help fund the Howard “Kvetch” Shapiro wing at the new 16 suite MJHS Hospice inpatient residence located on the oceanfront campus of Menorah in Manhattan Beach. It will be the first in New York City to treat children as well as adults. The MJHS Hospice residence, on the grounds of Jewish Home Lifecare in the Bronx, will treat adults. Both hospice residences will be a home-like setting and provide for patients physically and psychologically—making it possible for families to stay with their loved ones comfortably and for as long as they wish.

The inaugural “Reaching for the Stars” event included an exhibit of celebrity memorabilia collected by the late Howard “Kvetch” Shapiro, HIV/AIDS activist, humorist and columnist. Shapiro was also honored posthumously. His sister, Leslie Shapiro Greenberg, accepted the first annual Humanitarian Award on his behalf.

During Howard’s courageous battle with a life-limiting illness, he corresponded with and collected memorabilia from a broad range of celebrities, including movies, theater, music and literature. It was his hope that the collection would be used to help and inspire others facing end of life.

“When my husband, Joel Greenberg, and I learned of the extraordinary programs and services at MJHS Hospice and Palliative Care,” said Leslie Shapiro Greenberg, “we decided to donate Howard’s collection to MJHS Foundation, so it could be used to raise funds for the Howard “Kvetch” Shapiro wing of MJHS’ groundbreaking new hospice inpatient residence.” She added, “We are also confident that Howard’s treasures will bring a smile to someone’s face, elicit a fond memory from the past, hum the theme song from a favorite TV show, sing a Top 10 hit or re-read a favorite book.”

David Nussbaum, Executive Director of MJHS Foundation and Chief Development Officer of MJHS said, “Leslie and Joel Greenberg’s support of Sixteen Lights is rooted in their strong culture of philanthropy. Their generous donation will help bring joy to generations of New Yorkers to come.” He added, “MJHS is building hospice residences because there is a very real need for quality, compassionate hospice care in this city. People with an advanced illness deserve to live life as fully and comfortably as they’re able, for as long as they’re able—especially children, who are so much in need of love, assurance and normalcy.”

Celebrity co-chairs for Reaching for the Stars were:

- Edward Albee, Tony- and Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright
- Marvin Hamlisch, Emmy-, Grammy-, Oscar-, Tony- and Pulitzer Prize-winning composer
- Elliot Gould, Academy Award-nominated star of films ranging from MASH to Ocean’s Eleven
- Florence Henderson, singer and actress known to millions for playing Carol Brady on TV’s The Brady Bunch
- Neil Sedaka, legendary singer and Grammy-winning songwriter

About Sixteen Lights

Sixteen Lights: The Campaign to Build New York’s Most Innovative Hospice Residences will bring hospice care into the 21st Century. The centerpiece is the new 16-suite inpatient residence at our Menorah campus on the ocean in Manhattan Beach. It will be the first inpatient hospice residence in New York City to accept children as well as adults. Our second residence will consist of 16 studio apartments on the grounds of Jewish Home Lifecare in the Bronx. Both residences will provide a home-like setting where we can provide for patients physically and psychologically and where families can stay with their loved ones as often and for as long as they wish. An oasis of comfort and support to people of all cultures, the Sixteen Lights residences are a shining example of the vision and pioneering spirit of The Brooklyn Ladies who founded the organization in 1907.
